Business-to-business legal services essentially provide services when there is a dispute between two or more businesses or corporate entities, sole proprietors or firms, and another company or individual. Legal services are required for the smooth functioning of your business.

The main types of B2B legal services are civil or criminal, mergers and acquisitions, business transactions, and others. Mergers and acquisitions are deals in which two companies combine in some way. In a merger, two companies of comparable size join forces to form a new corporate entity. An acquisition, on the other hand, occurs when a larger corporation acquires a smaller company, absorbing the smaller company's business. The services are divided into size of the law forms such as large law firms and small law firms and the services are used by listed corporations, government institutions, small and medium-sized enterprises, high net worth individuals, and others.
