Medical billing outsourcing services are services in which a healthcare provider hires a medical billing service provider outside their practice to do all the billing.

The main types of services in medical billing outsourcing are the front end and back end. The front-end is in charge of the patient experience, while the back-end is in charge of claims processing and reimbursement. To push income across the cycle, each component has its own departments, people, and policies. The different components include in-house, and outsourced and are used by various sectors such as hospitals and physician offices.
