"Take Courage, My Daughter" is a celebration of resilience and faith, showcasing how enduring bonds can sustain individuals through life's trials. Linder's narrative is a testament to the notion that one is never truly alone, even in the loneliest moments. The memoir is illuminated by the steadfast support of two teenagers who became lifelong friends, remaining by her side for over forty years.

The LA Times Festival of Books, taking place on April 20-21 at the USC campus, provides a platform for a diverse array of narratives that uplift and empower. Linder's memoir is expected to be a highlight at the festival, resonating with readers seeking stories of courage, faith, and the power of friendship.

For more information about "Take Courage, My Daughter" and other featured titles, visitors are encouraged to stop by the MainSpring Books booth during the event. The festival promises to be an unforgettable experience, celebrating the power of storytelling and the resilience of the human spirit.
