Definition:

Debt consolidation is a solution for consumers' overload by credit card debt. Consolidation cuts cost by lowering the interest rate on debts and reducing monthly payments by merging multiple bills into a single debt. There are two major types of debt consolidations one is taking a loan or signing up for a debt management program that doesn't include loan. The first step towards debt consolidation is calculating the total amount payable every month and then the average interest paid on those cards. The second step is looking at the monthly budget and other necessities.
