Founded in 1972 by famed recovery advocate Joseph “Joe” McQuany, Serenity Park has a rich history as a mainstay of addiction recovery for more than 50 years. Previously known as Serenity House, the facility was one of the first in Arkansas to offer a gender-specific program for women. It moved to its current location in 1990, and was acquired by businesswoman Tara Tinnin in 2018.

Serenity Park now joins Country Road Recovery Center in Tecumseh, OK, Holland Pathways in Wichita, KS, and Sunflower Recovery in Osawatomie, KS, as a member of the greater Pathways Recovery Centers organization.

“Pathways Recovery Centers is committed to providing accessible, effective addiction and mental health treatment to communities across the heartland and beyond,” Drew Laboon, Director of Operations for Pathways Recovery Centers says.

“With its storied history in recovery and dedication to modern, evidence-based, and compassionate care, Serenity Park was a perfect choice to join our family of programs, and we’re proud to now call it a Pathways Recovery Center.”

Serenity Park CEO Tara Tinnin adds, “Pathways Recovery Center has an unmatched dedication to providing help where people need it. I’m so proud of how far Serenity Park has come, and look forward to seeing how far we can now go together.”
