US Fertility's physicians, epidemiologists, and affiliated fellow researchers won 3 out of 4 of the 2024 PCRS research awards announced at the annual meeting, including First Prize Outstanding Research Paper for the second year in a row.

"Providing excellent patient care relies on the hard work of our entire network of world-class care teams and staff, and it is this excellent patient care that fuels our research efforts," shares Kate Devine, M.D., Medical Director and Chief Research Officer for US Fertility. "I am grateful to the USF team for helping advance our knowledge base in the field of reproductive medicine, so we can help more patients realize their family-building goals."

During the four-day conference, Alexander Quaas, M.D., Ph.D., of Shady Grove Fertility (SGF), began his term as PCRS President.

"It is truly an honor to represent US Fertility and our incredible team of world-class physicians and researchers at PCRS," shares Dr. Quaas, who provides patient care at SGF's Solana Beach, CA location. "Our field is rapidly innovating with new advancements in clinical research and genetics, which really drives home the purpose of coming together regularly as colleagues to share findings and ultimately, provide the highest-quality, evidence-based care to our patients."
