Covid-19 Scenario:

The outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic had a mixed impact on the crowdfunding market. Businesses and individuals turned to crowdfunding to raise money during the economic downturn caused by the pandemic. Consequently, the number of crowdfunding campaigns and the amount of funds increased.

The pandemic also led to a rise in the use of crowdfunding for certain causes, such as those related to healthcare and medical research. People sought ways to support healthcare workers and researchers working to combat the virus, and crowdfunding enabled them to do so. Moreover, the awareness about crowdfunding as an alternative way to raise funds grew among people during the pandemic, as traditional fundraising methods were impacted by social distancing and lockdowns.

However, the crisis also made it more difficult for some campaigns to reach their fundraising goals, as many people had less disposable income due to job losses or other financial issues. The report offers a detailed segmentation of the global crowdfunding market based on type, investment size, application, and region. The report provides an analysis of each segment and sub-segment with the help of tables and figures. This analysis helps market players, investors, and new entrants in determining the sub-segments to be tapped on to achieve growth in the coming years.

Based on type, the debt-based crowdfunding segment held the largest share in 2021, accounting for more than two-fifths of the global crowdfunding market and would maintain its dominance through 2031. The equity-based crowdfunding segment, however, is estimated to witness the fastest CAGR of 17.1% during the forecast period.
