The alliance with Cory Redwine & Marker 24 Marina amplifies our capacity to effect real change. Cory's dedication and our collaborative ethos are central to our mission of environmental preservation.”

*Gregor Dornau, Star brite
President*

Under the leadership of Cory Redwine, Star brite Project SeaSafe Conservation Director, the Clean Water Collective has become a key initiative, showcasing the company's steadfast commitment to protecting and rehabilitating aquatic ecosystems and coastal habitats, with the Indian River Lagoon and adjoining estuaries as prime examples. This year, the event is expanding on previous successes, inviting community members, volunteers, and environmental enthusiasts for a weekend of cleaning, conserving, and collectively celebrating local waters.

Star brite President, Greg Dornau, expressed his enthusiasm: "We have known Cory Redwine for a long time, getting to work with her on conservation projects supported by both Star brite and her—like CCA initiatives and assisting with Blair Wiggins' Indian River Clam Restoration. So when we got the opportunity to add her to our team a few years ago and bring more engagement to our corporate conservation initiatives, we jumped at it. Her passion for 'Doing Gooder,' combined with an insane work ethic, has led to repeat success in improving many aspects of our waterways and made her a role model for environmental stewardship. We could not be prouder to have her leading our team and look forward to ongoing contributions."
