Brady comes to FBCO after successfully managing the Ohio commercial banking team at First Merchants Bank for the past 15 years.

In his role as president, he will be responsible for overseeing the day-to-day activities of its two Central Ohio locations, as well as the bank's commercial and residential lending practices.

"Martin brings a level of experience to our team that will help us move to the next level," said John Smiley, Chief Executive Officer. "His relationship with the Central Ohio business community is unique. I couldn't be happier that he's joined our team."

"I'm very excited to be taking on this role," Brady said. "First Bank of Central Ohio is very well positioned in the marketplace and well equipped to deliver significant impact for our customers."

According to Smiley, small- and medium-sized businesses in the Columbus area continue to be FBCO's primary focus, ensuring they have access to capital and the other resources they need to thrive. "That's why I believe Martin was a perfect fit for us," he noted.

In addition to his role at FBCO, Brady serves as the current President of Nazareth Towers, a nonprofit organization that works to provide affordable housing.

He has been active in the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, as a member of its Small Business Council; the Family Business Center; the Salvation Army; and St. Timothy's School.

Prior to his tenure at First Merchants Bank, Brady worked in the Middle Market Group at Key Bank.

He obtained his Bachelor's Degree in Finance and Marketing from The Ohio State University. Brady has four children and lives in Powell with his wife Marina and their daughter.
