Brady L. Dreasher, ISA CAPP, GPPA, CES, CAGA, WSET1, President of Art of Estates, and Denice S. Morris, ASA, both certified appraisers from Art of Estates will return for their fifth showing the annual PBS Kansas Antiques Fair. The event will be on April 27, 2024, at the PBS Kansas headquarters in Wichita. In the same spirit as Antiques Roadshow, the PBS Kansas event connects experts who can help members of the community learn about the history, provenance, and the value of family heirlooms while raising money for the community-supportive nonprofit.

The following weekend, on May 4, Dreasher will return for the third time since 2015 to the Kansas City PBS 2024 Appraisal Fair. A limited number of attendees will be matched up with an expert to unlock the hidden value and history of their art and antiques. The always sold-out event will raise money for PBS, a nonprofit organization that serves a diverse community with essential sources for independent journalism, multimedia storytelling, music discovery, and education resources.

Art of Estates is honored to once again be selected for these types of events. Criteria for selection includes a commitment to a high level of credibility with community leaders, clients, and appraiser peers.

For more than 14 years, Art of Estates has been a trusted name in the personal property, antique, and art appraisal field across the Midwest. Dreasher said, "Art of Estates continues to foster trust with the public by not buying, selling, or taking personal property into our possession—building trust and credibility with our clients and the community."

Since its founding, the company has consistently delivered exceptional unbiased appraisal services and has built long-term relationships with clients. In addition, Art of Estates is committed to helping raise money for nonprofits with similar values such as PBS and regional museums.
