Agritourism is a subset of rural tourism. It is known by various names, depending on the region and type of farming, such as agriculture tourism, agritourism, farm tourism, farm vacation tourism, wine tourism, as well as some related terms that are used interchangeably with agritourism or that are complementary to agritourism including nature tourism, rural tourism, alternative farming, wildlife enterprises, ecotourism, Agritainment, heritage tourism, Agri education, and value-added agriculture. It is generally defined as visiting a working agricultural setting for leisure, recreation, or educational purposes.

Agritourism, a rapidly expanding sector, offers a unique fusion of agriculture and tourism. Its growth is propelled by several key industry trends and growth drivers. First, the desire for authentic experiences has led to increasing demand, with travelers seeking hands-on, farm-to-table encounters. Moreover, aligning with sustainability and eco-tourism trends, many agritourism destinations emphasize environmentally responsible practices, further attracting conscientious tourists. The rise of food tourism also significantly contributes to agritourism's success, allowing visitors to engage in culinary experiences, such as wine-tasting in vineyards or cheese-making on dairy farms. This sector's educational and recreational offerings cater to a diverse array of tourists, from families to retirees, fostering a deeper appreciation for agriculture.

According to agritourism market analysis, the agritourism market is segmented into activity, sales channel, and region. On the basis of activity, the agritourism market report is categorized into on-farm sales, outdoor recreation, agritainment, educational tourism, accommodations, and others. By sales channel, it is segregated into travel agents and direct. Region wise, it is analyzed across North America (the U.S., Canada, and Mexico), Europe (Germany, the UK, France, Russia, Italy, Spain, and rest of Europe), Asia-Pacific (China, Japan, Australia, India, South Korea, and rest of Asia-Pacific) and LAMEA (Latin America, Middle East, Africa).

By activity, the market is classified into on-farm sales, outdoor recreation, agritainment, educational tourism, accommodations, and others. The on-farm sales segment accounted for a major Agritourism Market Share in 2022 and is expected to grow at a significant CAGR during the forecast period. This is attributed to the fact that agriculture universities and non-agricultural universities are progressively involved in providing agriculture related educational experience. Some courses in agriculture universities are compulsory subjects to study agritourism and compulsory for every agriculture college to arrange one tour to nearby agritourism center. This collectively attributes to upsurge the Agritourism Market demand through educational tourism segment.
