Under the agreement, Enhesa and Langan will join forces to provide companies with an end-to-end compliance solution focused on helping clients democratize their EHS and sustainability programs across the regions in which they operate. The companies will bundle together complementary services and leverage their global networks of experts to create a comprehensive scope of solutions for their clients and offer an innovative portfolio of EHS and sustainability services. The increased focus on EHS and ESG performance requires companies to take swift action in meeting ever-changing regulations. Langan’s

EHS and ESG experts will work directly with Enhesa’s compliance intelligence and forecaster content to help companies comply with ease and take the guesswork out of setting up a complete regulatory compliance program.

“As sustainability and EHS compliance requirements evolve, companies need robust, real-time solutions that allow them to take a proactive approach to risk management,” said Peter Schramme, CEO of Enhesa. “The sheer volume of regulatory change can be a huge challenge to stay on top of for companies of any size, and we are thrilled that this collaboration will provide clients with a platform that allows them to meet their EHS and sustainability goals on a truly global scale. Bringing together Langan’s consulting services with Enhesa’s regulatory monitoring creates a winning combination.”

“This alliance allows us to streamline compliance workflows for our clients by combining our engineering and environmental consulting services with the world’s leading source of global regulatory intelligence and insight,” said Robert “Rory” Johnston, Principal, Langan. “By working with Enhesa, we are able to give our clients a complete view of the regulatory landscape to better anticipate changes, increase efficiency, and lower overall project costs.”
