travel tech startup that wants to become the “airbnb of hotels” by offering extended hotel stays at discounted prices.

The Yovivo platform includes a short-stay booking engine featuring 350,000+ hotels as well as a bespoke intranet for hotels to manage their own properties. Yovivo’s core business, however, is its long-stay hotel booking system, which was released today with its first participating hotels, including the Wotels brand, the Amic hotels group and the Son Caliu Spa Hotel. The first properties to join the long-stay offering are located in digital nomad hotspots Spain and Portugal. Yovivo aims to sign-up a hundred more properties before the end of May 2024.

The Yovivo team chose to launch the long-stay booking system with a brand that reflects the same core values as the Yovivo platform, offering not just a place to sleep but a complete experience. Wotels properties include amenities such as common areas, co-working spaces and activities such as surfing, yoga and karaoke, in order to create an authentic travel experience and build a community.
