They are the ones who are keeping the countryside in tip top shape by working hard, walking many miles a day so their animals can graze on fresh grass, flowers and shrubs, maintaining the environment by doing so.

cheese that will reward you with depth of flavour varying with the seasons than making compromises by keeping their animals in a shed all day.

Jerome and his team want to focus on French cheeses to respond to the drastic lowering of its availability in the UK since Brexit, indeed many French cheese mongers no longer come across the channel to sell their products because it has become unworkable.

They have selected so far 50 cheeses which they have worked with for 17 years as cheese mongers, either made from raw milk by a farmer or pasteurised and produced by small cooperatives which support their local dairy producers who share their beliefs.

Should this venture take off, They will soon go back to France to meet producers in order to broaden the range.

They certainly have the potential to become the go to website for French quality cheeses in the UK.
