CAMBRIDGE, CAMBRIDGESHIRE, UK, April 25, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Digital onboarding provider Zenoo is

There are many individuals who would look to prey on the most vulnerable people in the international community. We are proud to be playing a part in keeping these people safe."

The Cambridge-based tech company – whose clients include London Stock Exchange, Experian, Transunion and NASA - supplies digital onboarding and protection from financial crime for businesses but also has a significant not-for-profit wing called FreedomID.

The latest not-for-profit project is ensuring the refugees helped by Care4Calais are kept safe by checking the backgrounds of those volunteering.

Care4Calais is a volunteer run charity delivering essential aid and support to refugees living in the UK, Northern France and Belgium.

Operating year round, its focus is to provide warm clothing, bedding, food and medical assistance to people in desperate need. It also provides social support and interaction, including language lessons and sports and music workshops.

Stuart Watkins, Zenoo CEO, said: "Sadly we are in a time of mass emergency migration as refugees flee war-torn areas. And as uncomfortable as it is to accept, there are many individuals who would look to prey on the most vulnerable people in the international community. We are proud to be playing a part in keeping these people safe."

A Care4Calais spokesman added: "The people we help have taken extreme measures to escape hardship and danger and are simply looking for the basic human right of safety. Having our volunteers fully checked is an essential part of ensuring that safety."

Freedom ID Check uses the same technology leading financial institutions use to comply with antimoney laundering requirements and which border control agencies use to verify individuals.
