Terry C. Carney, Sr., a multifaceted filmmaker, author, and community leader, has captivated audiences with his compelling narratives that delve deep into the heart of societal issues. His latest endeavors, the documentary "Put the Guns Down: A World Epidemic," and memoir "Last Man Standing," are now showcased on his dynamic new website.

"Put the Guns Down: A World Epidemic," produced by Ice-T and directed by Carney Sr. and Eric Herbert, confronts the stark reality of gun violence with unflinching honesty. Set against the backdrop of South Central Los Angeles, this groundbreaking documentary offers a sobering glimpse into the deep-rooted societal issues perpetuating violence. Through candid interviews and raw footage, Carney sheds light on the profound impact of economic struggles and inadequate mental health care, challenging viewers to take action and drive meaningful change.

In "Last Man Standing," Carney provides readers with an introspective view of the unforgiving streets of Los Angeles and its aftermath. Groomed by criminal masterminds, hustlers, and gangbangers, Carney's memoir delves into themes of faith, destiny, and redemption, showcasing the resilience of the human spirit in the face of adversity.

Terry C. Carney, Sr., also known as a community leader and musician, has earned prestigious awards such as the "Fathers in Hip Hop Fatherhood Acknowledgement Award" and the "TAF Dignitary Award of Supreme Excellence," highlighting his positive influence and significant
