Roy Wood Jr., Former 'The Daily Show' Correspondent and Birmingham native: "Josh's journey is one of perseverance & resilience that eventually became a testament and beacon to so many other people who came up being treated as outcasts themselves. Putting those feelings into words is always essential in helping the next generation of youth."

author: "What a wonderful, sweet story! Share it widely!"

Olivia Hill, Councilmember At-Large, Nashville City Council, and first out transgender person elected to office in Tennessee: "Josh's account of his journey is not unlike my own. This is an important book for kids who just want to live their lives happily and healthily. It recognizes queer people are valid, valuable humans who deserve to live in the light, not the shadows."

Stacy Layne Matthews, RuPaul's Drag Race Star: "Something so relatable. From a small town or even a big city. Josh's experience is something we all need to hear, never knowing whose heart it could touch. Acceptance starts at home. Then everything will fall into place. Like a beautiful rainbow that we all are!"

Ann Walker, Actress: "Finding My Rainbow" by Josh Coleman can be a wonderful tool to give a young person who is coming of age and questioning their gender identity. It's written with honesty and deep awareness of his journey to acceptance through difficult times."
