“After a successful exhibition in 2023, we can’t wait to be back at Digestive Disease Week 2024,” shares Beverly Coleman, Chief Human Resources Officer, Allied Digestive Health. “Connecting with gastroenterology experts at Digestive Disease Week allows us to stay up to date with current practices and gives us the opportunity to educate the industry on what we have to offer.”

Beyond the Allied Digestive Health booth, which attendees can visit to learn more about the brand's practice locations and philosophy, as well as employee benefits and the new technology and ancillary services ADH has invested in to improve patient care, ADH will also be exhibiting at the DDW Career Fair. The perfect time for networking, educating, and connecting with gastroenterologists, ADH will be sharing more about the high-quality care provided to patients across New Jersey and New York, as well as attractive employee offerings.

“We’re looking forward to the opportunity to meet fellows at the DDW Career Fair,” Coleman continues. “We welcome the brimming knowledge, fresh ideas, and new mindsets that these future GI professionals have to offer. Bringing in these practitioners allows us to continue reaching patients everywhere, from big cities to small towns, and providing them with the inclusive and compassionate care ADH prides itself on.”
