By price point, the glassware market is categorized into premium, medium, and economy. The glass jars segment led the market and accounted for 39.9% of the global glassware market in 2021 and is expected to maintain its dominance during the forecast period. Mid-range glassware has a collection of different glass products as most consumers prefer mid-range products that are good in quality and slightly inexpensive. As most consumers are mid-range buyers, this segment offers many products to attract the population. Moreover, the mid-range is the only section that every glassware manufacturing brand and company targets as it generates most of the revenue. The e-commerce sector also plays a major role in the segment as it provides large varieties of glassware products at affordable prices.
