“I'm running to replace an establishment Democrat incumbent, Susie Lee, who merely provides lip-service instead of legitimate policy on issues, such as the housing crisis, LGBTQIA+ protections, climate change, and nothing about Project 2025 whatsoever. The time for establishment Democrats is over. We need leaders who will bring new energy and ideas to the times we are facing. Nevadans deserve better”, said Brittain.

Brittain's campaign is focused on addressing a myriad of issues such as, Reproductive Freedom, Anti-LGBTQIA+ legislation, stopping PROJECT 2025, and economic inequality for all. She believes in creating a more inclusive and equitable society for all. Her candidacy is unexpected and she is thought of as the outlier, but make no mistake, she's here to do make changes.

The United States House of Representatives has never had a transgender representative, and Brittain's candidacy is a significant step towards diversity and inclusivity in national politics. Her campaign is a testament to the progress being made towards equal representation and opportunities for all individuals.
