"Many of the newer Internet 'gig economy' services like Instacart may not be in compliance with federal and state employment laws, especially regarding misclassification of employees and contractors as well as the correct and legal payment of wages and overtime," explained Chris Q. Davis, managing partner at the law firm. "Our new hotline and survey help Instacart workers take the first step at learning their legal rights."

Here is background on the case. Working Solutions Law Firm has taken a proactive step to address concerns regarding wage practices within the gig economy. The decision stems from the inspiring efforts of an individual Instacart Shopper who, without legal representation, successfully filed a claim against Instacart for unpaid wages and penalties. This Shopper's determination led the Department of Labor to initiate collection proceedings against Instacart.

Despite Instacart's significant revenue, some Instacart Shoppers struggle to earn even minimum wage. The successful claim filed by the individual Shopper against Instacart is a significant achievement. In response, Working Solutions Law Firm has initiated a mass legal action on behalf of Instacart Shoppers nationwide.

The firm believes that Instacart's misclassification of Shoppers as independent contractors has led to various violations, including failure to compensate Shoppers for all hours worked and reliance on an unlawful payment system. The aim is to advocate for the rights of Instacart Shoppers and ensure fair compensation within the gig economy.

Instacart workers or contractors who believe they may have been impacted by these issues are encouraged to reach out to Working Solutions Law Firm. Their voices matter, and the firm is available to help them understand their rights and explore their options. Potential clients can contact the firm to discuss their situation confidentially.

Any employee who believes that they may be subject to unfair wages and/or overtime as well as misclassification can reach out for a private, confidential consultation with the law firm at <https://www.workingsolutionsnyc.com/free-case-evaluation>.
