About the Author

Birger Sjöberg's life story is as captivating as the tales he shares in "Tales from the Sea." Born into an affluent family in Stockholm, Sjöberg's early years were shaped by a challenging upbringing marked by complex family dynamics.

Seeking solace and escape, he found himself drawn to the vastness of the sea, where he discovered a world of adventure and exploration. Fueled by a deep-seated desire for adventure and spurred on by the complexities of his family life, Sjöberg pursued a career as a professional sailmaker and an avid explorer. His journey led him across continents and oceans, from summers spent on a Swedish island to youthful escapades as a farmhand in France. Venturing further, he traversed the Atlantic, Mediterranean Sea, North Sea, Caribbean, and Baltic Sea, each voyage adding new chapters to his life's narrative.

Despite the challenges encountered along the way, Sjöberg's spirit remained indomitable. While he has since retired from the more arduous adventures, he still finds solace and joy in spending time at sea aboard a small gaff-rigged skiff. Additionally, he explores the northern wilderness of Sweden on horseback, a testament to his enduring love for nature and exploration. At home, Sjöberg shares his life with his fiancée Pernilla and a menagerie of animals, including 13 horses, a dog, and a cat, along with a tame badger until just a year ago.

The inspiration behind "Tales from the Sea" stems from a lifelong dream and a brother's sage advice. From childhood, Birger Sjöberg harbored a desire to become a writer, yet it wasn't until later in life that he embarked on his literary journey. Encouraged by his brother's simple yet profound suggestion to "write about your adventures at sea," Sjöberg found the spark he needed to bring his stories to life. Through his eleven published books, Sjöberg's legacy as a storyteller continues to inspire readers of all ages to embark on their own literary journeys.
