Technology Influencers helps companies punch their way into the map

ATLANTA, GA, USA, May 13, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Over more than three decades, Jeff Kagan has developed one of the strongest and well-known brand names in the technology industry. In fact, he became a powerful influencer years before the term was ever invented. Today, using his name recognition, he helps other companies punch their way onto the map to get seen and noticed as well.

Over time Kagan has learned how having a strong brand name can also help other companies get noticed. Senior executives of companies ask him how they can duplicate this success.

He has helped many companies over several decades of industry growth and change. However, he is very careful about choosing companies who become clients.

Over time, Kagan has worked with the many competitors, large and small in the technology space including 5G, wireless, telecom, pay TV, streaming, AI, IoT and so much more.

The marketplace is loud, confusing and full of chaos. Kagan has helped many companies raise their profile and get noticed over and above the noise of the competition.

As the marketplace grows and changes, it is vital every competitor learns how to punch their way onto the map and be noticed among customers, investors, workers and the media.

"Finding a high level of visibility is the ongoing challenge of our time." Says Jeff Kagan
