About the Author

- o My son Troy and I have always been very curious about "world-building" in the context of a fast-paced science fiction story. Taj's Sabbatical takes this thought and spins our solar system (Earth, Luna, Mars, and the Asteroid Belt) in a direction that bends the future of humanity in a different direction. The story is set 80 years in the future and uses characters from many different walks of life in a "normalized" fashion, including the presence of synthetics, cyborgs, formerly embodied beings (living in virtual space), gay, straight, old, young, etc. The point is to tell a story in a context, not a story about the context.
- o Authors are Artell Smith and Troy Smith.
- o When we want to relax with a good book, Troy and, we choose a science fiction or fantasy book. That's no doubt the source of the attraction for writing in this genre. However, I actively write in three different areas: 1) as mentioned, science fiction (Taj's Sabbatical) and fantasy (A Death at Christmas and Other Wondrous Events), 2) business management (No Time to Waste and Engage.Coach.Develop.), and 3) elder care (Champions Needed, with Carol J. Purdy Miller).
