Attendees joining the groundbreaking ceremony should park at New Birth, located at 6400 Woodrow Rd in Stonecrest, in the designated parking lot and take the shuttle to the staging area. The event will take place, rain or shine.

“Our commitment to this life-changing endeavor is rooted in the belief that everyone deserves an affordable place to call home and a pathway to homeownership that has become unobtainable for so many households,” said Bryant. “We recognize the mounting obstacles confronting aspiring homeowners in the relentless landscape of the national real estate market. This effort is not just about building houses; it's about erecting pillars of hope and opportunity for families seeking stability and prosperity and laying the foundation for dreams to flourish and communities to thrive.”

Led by seasoned real estate sales leader and developer Anthony Williams, Sydney A. Capital Partners hopes to transform the market by providing exciting residential, commercial and mixed-use properties. "In the world of real estate development, we pride ourselves as a visionary firm guided by innovation and anchored in integrity. Through this partnership with New Birth, we look to dynamically reimagine housing concepts in this area by ushering in bold, fresh, and quality designed marque properties," Williams said.

New Birth, recognized as the largest land-owning Black church in America, with 270 contiguous acres in DeKalb County, marks its first major development project in two decades with The Benison ATL. This groundbreaking endeavor will unfold in three phases: Phase I will feature 120 mini-homes, followed by townhomes in Phase II, and concluding with residential/retail space in Phase III. Notable amenities include an amphitheater, expansive green spaces, and a swimming pool – catering to diverse demographics including young professionals, couples, empty nesters, and seniors.

In addition to Bryant, confirmed speakers include Congressman Hank Johnson, DeKalb County CEO Michael Thurmond, Stonecrest Mayor Jazzmin Cobble, and Stonecrest Council Member Tammy Grimes.
