Since opening its first office in 2002, Intero has cultivated deep roots in Silicon Valley and throughout the San Francisco Bay Area, standing strong despite numerous market challenges.

“Our partnership with Intero marks an important milestone for Super in the Bay Area. Super is the only Silicon Valley technology company reinventing home warranty, and Bay Area homeowners expect the convenience of technology-driven solutions,” said Jorey Ramer, CEO of Super. “We are excited to partner with a brokerage whose clients appreciate a fresh approach towards a decades-old, legacy industry.”

One of the key features that sets Super apart is its focus on creating an "own like a renter" approach for homeowners. Unlike traditional providers, Super offers a comprehensive solution that goes beyond covering breakdowns. With Super's powerful technology platform, homeowners can easily coordinate repairs, schedule appointments, and track the progress of their repairs—all through a simple and intuitive app. This end-to-end coordination ensures homeowners no longer have to manage repairs themselves, saving them time, effort, and stress. By investing in technology, Super provides a streamlined, worry-free experience for homeowners with more protection than traditional home warranty companies and fewer out-of-pocket costs.

The partnership launched in May, with Super's home warranties available to over 1,900 Intero agents. Super is a preferred partner of HomeServices of America, Intero's parent company and one of the nation's largest providers of brokerage and related services.
