At TCP, we challenge ourselves to match customer pain points with innovative solutions and Supplier Central is an excellent example.”

Gonzalo Nunez, CEO of TCP

business solutions that transform mid-sized manufacturers, announced today that it is expanding the Fluent platform with the addition of the Supplier Central module. Fluent consists of products and services that amplify ERP data for maximum strategic and financial impact, leveraging both the power of AI and TCP’s decades of experience servicing this niche market.

TCP’s Fluent platform brings innovation and digital transformation to mid-sized manufacturers in ways never thought possible. Supplier Central helps this market optimize vendor invoice processing, with particular support with country specific regulations. One such example involves third party validation of the tax entity in the vendor country. Supplier Central enables the electronic processing of the invoices and supplier tax documentation through a centralized service, leveraging AI to automatically update vendor invoices in Epicor Kinetic without human intervention.

Gonzalo Nunez, TCP CEO commented, “At TCP, we challenge ourselves to match customer pain points with innovative solutions and Supplier Central is an excellent example. The volume of invoices that many of our customers face can be crippling, creating a significant burden to the local accounting teams and presenting a risk for human error. Epicor Kinetic is such a powerful tool and our goal is to help make our clients’ users’ jobs a little easier so that their business can realize the full potential of the ERP.”

“We are extremely excited to show and deliver Supplier Central to all our Epicor Kinetic customers,” added Ivan Rebolledo, TCP’s Chief Revenue Officer. “We’ve seen the demand for this kind of solution for a while, and now together with ever evolving tax regulations in many international markets the need for an automated supplier portal has only grown in the priority list of our customers.”

All of the Fluent platform tools are each affordable, easy to implement and use, and deliver a ROI multiple that transforms customers in real time. The Fluent products and services are available to firms globally and not just in Latin America. For more information visit www.tcpmiami.com/fluent.
