Automobile companies focus on the production of advanced golf carts that have lower particular emission and are of relatively low cost. The new Solo Rider technology and the adaptive golf cart designed for a single user allows disabled people to access the golf course and the game as well. Innovations such as extreme golf carts and solar power golf carts also boost the growth of the America golf cart industry. One of the most recent developments in the golf cart technology is the Golf Board, a golf cart that is inspired by the skateboard. The Golf Board is driven by front and back gear boxes providing power to all four wheels. The rider controls the vehicle in an upright position as if riding skateboard, leaning right or left to make turns. The Golf Board has been well received by the golfing community as it speeds up the game and according to the manufacturers has up to 75% less impact on turf than traditional golf carts. Such advancements for golf cart are expected to create numerous opportunities for the key players for America golf cart market growth.

There is a decrease in price of fuel cells with the advancement in technology and better operations. The price of batteries has decreased by 80% in the last 6 years. This is the favorable condition for increasing the sales of the golf carts which are powered by electricity. Further, while considering the onboard storage of energy, hydrogen has an edge over the Lithium-ion battery as it is stored in a high-pressure below the vehicle which offers increased mileage. Also, 1 kg of hydrogen cell is capable of storing 236 times more energy when compared with the Li-on battery. Therefore, it is an opportunity for the automobile industry followed by America golf cart market. This creates ample opportunities for the key players operating in the America golf cart market.
