Disposable cutlery, sometimes known as single-use cutlery, is cutlery which has to be disposed of after its use even though it can be used for decoration purposes after it's used. Nowadays disposable cutlery is designed and manufactured well and in an attractive manner generally, people are disposing of it after use. The vast majority are made of wood and plastic. Disposable cutlery is for single use and can be used to have food only once, and have to be disposed of after its use. They come in different sizes, shapes, and materials. Disposable cutlery is available for both household and commercial use, in various sizes and shapes. The disposable cutlery includes spoons, forks, and knives. To make them simpler to handle, they are made lightweight.

The disposable Cutlery market size is expected to grow at a significant rate owing to the rise in awareness regarding wooden disposable cutlery. The increase in the hospitality industry along with the rise in the demand for fast food are disposable cutlery market trends which will contribute to disposable cutlery market growth.

According to the Environmental Protection Department of Japan, 14,600,000,000 pieces of plastic cutlery are being disposed of throughout the year. Asia-Pacific acquires the most share of the market region-wise. The primary market for the disposable cutlery market is the tableware market. In recent times governments are planning to ban plastic cutlery in their respective nations as it is causing harm to the environment.

Plastic disposable cutlery harms nature as it does not get disposed of naturally and easily. According to nature conservancy Canada, by avoiding the use of plastic straws and cutlery we can reduce environmental harm to some extent. Even companies try to cut such cutlery which can harm the environment. Due to the increase in awareness among the population, people put their best efforts to save mother earth. There is a rise in general awareness about sustainable development and people have started making conscious choices to reduce environmental hazards. This is anticipated to restrain the growth of the market.
