The brand has highlighted a standout selection of shoes to celebrate on Women's Golf Day this year. The ultra-modern OLIVERA sneaker style shoe spearheads the women's offering with its advanced design and supremely fashionable appearance. The striking AVIVA shoe offers best-in-class support via a heightened heel on the advanced Airplay 17 outsole and features a lightweight and breathable upper to ensure feet remain cool and dry all day long. For every pair sold, the brand will donate money to the Hoedspruit Endangered Species Centre to help save the critically endangered King Cheetah that inspired the pattern on the trendy shoe's upper.

Women golfers looking to dazzle on and off the course can look to the trendy BOREAL shoe as it offers a super appealing appearance matched with top functionality. The premium Nappa leather construction and ARNEFLEX® memory foam insert sole combine to provide exceptional comfort both on and off the course, while the two colorways both complete a number of fashionable golfing outfits.

Sharing her thoughts on Duca del Cosma, Georgia Hall said: "I love everything about the Duca del Cosma brand – from the quality of design and comfort of the shoes to the storyline behind the Italian styling and craftsmanship."

Duca del Cosma was founded in Italy in 2004 by Baldovino Mattiazzo, who still designs the distinctive collections for men and women golfers. Since 2016, the company has been reinvigorated by Frank van Wezel and his wife Caroline to now see its shoes sold in more than 40 different countries worldwide. The global brand operates from four offices around the world – The Netherlands (HQ), the United States, United Kingdom and South Africa.
