Definition:

A trademark renewal service is a professional service provided to trademark owners to facilitate the renewal or maintenance of their registered trademarks. When a trademark is registered with a government authority, such as the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) in the U.S. or the European Union Intellectual Property Office (EUIPO) in Europe, it is typically granted protection for a specific period, usually 10 years.

Market Trends:

□ Adoption of digital platforms and online filing systems for trademark renewals.

Market Drivers:

□ Importance of maintaining brand identity and preventing trademark expiration.

Market Opportunities:

□ Leveraging technology to provide cost-effective and efficient renewal services.
