“People with autism deserve high-quality ABA services,” said Erick Dubuque, director of ACQ. “Organizations applying for accreditation from the Autism Commission on Quality must meet rigorous standards for patient care, administration, and transparency. Indiana Behavior Analysis Academy underwent a thorough review process to earn its accreditation.”

ACQ’s review process includes a wide range of business, clinical, and quality improvement activities to promote best practices and evidence-based pathways. The assessment considers clinical observations and satisfaction surveys from patients and staff, leadership interviews, and a desktop review.

“This accreditation reinforces our position as a leader in our industry,” said Lisa Steward, director of operations and founder of Indiana Behavior Analysis Academy, “setting us apart through a commitment to best practices, continuous improvement, and a focus on customer satisfaction.”

Indiana Behavior Analysis Academy is an organization that helps autistic children obtain the skills needed to successfully navigate their lives and grow to become more independent, happy young adults. Using ABA, it systematically introduces skill acquisition programs and behavior interventions that best prepare children for transitions into their schools and community based activities.

ACQ continues to accept new applications for its two-year accreditation from organizations offering ABA as a healthcare service to individuals with autism.
