Excerpt from The Silicon Review Article:

In the article, Damien Howard described his professional journey as being "marked by both challenges and rewards, providing ample opportunities for growth and learning along the way." He cited resilience and adaptability as essential qualities for navigating complexities in his career.

Howard shared some key lessons he has learned over the years: "You have to be a servant leader if you want to be effective...Be relentlessly curious while leading or managing people...Be repetitive and extremely clear about your 'why' for the business...Strive to listen at different levels to understand and build a path forward."

When asked about Grant Wagner's services, Howard explained they offer customized sourcing leveraging subject matter expert recruiters, a full-service engagement model, business intelligence, and access to global talent through an in-house immigration department. He emphasized Grant Wagner's boutique firm approach allows them to be "nimble, responsive, and capable of delivering both volume and quality" across industries like AI, cloud, cybersecurity and more."
