The world places the highest priority on public safety. To ensure effectiveness, public safety organizations are investing in various innovative technology. The government has implemented novel technologies and security measures in response to the rise in crime, antisocial behavior, and terrorist attacks. It has become necessary to improve the system and responses to catastrophic attacks and to find safe, cost-effective, and feasible solutions.

Additionally, various infrared cameras are being adopted for surveillance in defense, homeland security, perimeter surveillance, and enforcement fields. Enhanced features such as excellent performance, superior imaging capabilities, and high reliability drive the market's growth. These cameras can also be integrated with pan and tilt positioning systems to create a complete surveillance system for various end uses. Similarly, infrared cameras offer long-range detection up to 50 km, even in complete darkness. This feature adds traction to the market growth and offers lucrative global opportunities for the infrared camera market.
