/EINPresswire.com/ -- The much-anticipated documentary War and Justice premieres on June 6 at the Kino Museum, chronicling the 25-year history of the International Criminal Court (ICC) and providing an unfiltered look into its relentless mission to end the most serious crimes against humanity.

Directed by Marcus Vetter and Michele

Gentile, the film follows the late Benjamin Ferencz, the youngest chief prosecutor at the Nuremberg Trials, Luis Moreno Ocampo, the ICC's first prosecutor and Karim Kahn, the current ICC Prosecutor as they pursue justice for individual world leaders deemed responsible for war crimes.

This film should trigger a massive campaign to stop war as a mechanism for solving conflicts. Otherwise, we are living in Fortnite. To survive, you have to kill everyone.”

Luis Moreno Ocampo

The film traces two decades of the ICC's work, highlighting its efforts to hold accountable those responsible for atrocities committed in the Congo, Libya, Ukraine, Palestine and other war-torn regions of the world. The film concludes with Karim Khan, the current ICC prosecutor, traveling to Cairo to warn Hamas and Israel leaders to respect the legal limits. On May 20, 2024 Kahn requested to issue arrest warrants against three Hamas leaders, Israel Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Israel's Minister of Defense.

Director Marcus Vetter comments, "It's only now, over one decade after we began work on this documentary, that the world is finally beginning to recognize the urgent danger of escalating wars and the crucial role of the ICC to hold individuals responsible for war crimes, the indiscriminate killing of civilians, and genocide. The ICC's latest request to issue a new set of arrest warrants for war crimes in Israel and Gaza highlights the timeliness of this film."

"This film should trigger a massive campaign to stop war as a mechanism for solving conflicts," said Luis Moreno Ocampo. "Otherwise, we are living in Fortnite. To survive, you have to kill everyone."

A question-and-answer session will follow the premiere with the audience, featuring Marcus Vetter, Michele Gentile, Herta Däubler Gmelin, and Luis Moreno-Ocampo. The discussion will be moderated by bestselling author Marc Friedrich and streamed live.
