"Projects like Opera in the Park exemplify the creativity and care with which communities are telling their stories, creating connection, and responding to challenges and opportunities in their communities—all through the arts," said NEA Chair Maria Rosario Jackson, PhD. "So many aspects of our communities such as cultural vitality, health and wellbeing, infrastructure, and the economy are advanced and improved through investments in art and design, and the National Endowment for the Arts is committed to ensuring people across the country benefit."

"Of course, we are absolutely ecstatic at having won our first ever NEA grant!" says new Opera Idaho General Director, Stacey Trenteseaux. "It's a testimony to the quality of projects that Opera Idaho strives to produce and the expanding impact we are making on our community through free performing arts experiences."

"This event is growing its brand and its fans," says Opera Idaho Development Director, Carly Oppie. "As we prepare for the 4th annual concert, we hope that with Boise's continued growth, the financial and community support of Opera in the Park will grow with it! We are grateful and honored to be an NEA Grants for Arts Projects recipient. Please come take part in the magic with us on July 13!" - Carly Oppie, Opera Idaho Development Director.

Opera in the Park has become a beloved tradition and summer staple in Boise, blending opera, musical theater, live orchestral music, and a lively community atmosphere in the great outdoors. Set at the picturesque Gene Harris Bandshell in Julia Davis Park, the concert is free and open to the public and draws over 2,200 attendees, showcasing the immense popularity and community demand for accessible cultural events that appeal to audiences of all ages and backgrounds. In recent years, Opera in the Park has expanded to include a variety of local food trucks, a night-of raffle, a beer and wine garden, and a VIP area that boasts pre-show and all-night access to a private bar and hosted heavy appetizers. This year, kids can enjoy face painting, and all attendees can explore a variety of vendor booths, including those from other local arts organizations like Ballet Idaho and the Boise Phil. A variety of returning and new food vendors will be at the park for sweet and savory delights for the family.

Opera in the Park underscores Opera Idaho's commitment to making the arts accessible and fostering community spirit. The continued success of this event relies not only on funding from entities like the NEA, but the support of local donors and sponsors like Delta Dental, KTVB, Idaho Public Television, and generous individual opera patrons and contributors help make this free concert a reality for the fourth year in a row.
