Severe Asthma Overview

Asthma is the most common chronic respiratory disease all over the globe. It affects the airways in the lungs, which become inflamed and narrowed due to various triggers, making it harder for air to flow out. A complex activity between airway inflammation and remodeling results in airway hyper-responsiveness (AHR), leading to variable and excessive airway contraction.

Severe Asthma Epidemiology Segmentation:

- Total Prevalence of Severe Asthma
- Prevalent Cases of Severe Asthma by severity
- Gender-specific Prevalence of Severe Asthma
- Diagnosed Cases of Episodic and Chronic Severe Asthma
