Depending on the organization's tax year, they may be required to complete and transmit their 990 Series returns to the IRS this month.

For nonprofits, filing 990 Series returns isn't just about meeting regulatory requirements, it is also vital for maintaining transparency, credibility, and trust within their community. Failure to meet this deadline could result in serious consequences, risking the organization's tax-exempt status and tarnishing its reputation.

Organization Confronting the 990 Deadline on June 17

The IRS requires nonprofit organizations to file their 990 forms by the 15th day of the 5th month after their tax year ends. Organizations operating on a fiscal year from February 1st to January 31st have a deadline of June 17th.

This deadline also applies to organizations that have filed an extension using Form 8868, with the original deadline being December 15, 2023. Since the 15th day of the month falls on a weekend, all organizations should file by Monday, June 17th.

990 Forms that are Due June 17th:

All variants of the 990 forms share a common deadline. It's important to note that nonprofit organizations must select the appropriate 990 form based on their organization's profile.

Here are the requirements for filing each 990 form:

- Form 990-N - For organizations with gross receipts of $50,000 or less.
- Form 990-EZ - For organizations with gross receipts < $200,000 and assets < $500,000.

- Form 990 - For organizations with gross receipts of $200,000 or more (or) assets of $500,000
- Form 990-PF - For organizations classified as Private Foundations.
- Form 990-T - For organizations with unrelated business income of $1000 or more.
