Sunflower packaged seeds are seeds that are packed in different material bags to protect the cargo from mold, moisture, spoilage, and pests. These bags protect the contents from solar radiation and heat, as the high oil percentage and fiber content of sunflower seeds could cause self-heating during transportation.

The main types of packaged sunflower seeds are plain, salted, ranch-flavored, BBQ-flavored, dill pickle-flavored, and other flavored products. Plain sunflower seeds are sunflower seeds that do not contain any additional flavoring substances, such as sodium. The various packaging includes and is distributed through hypermarkets and supermarkets, convenience stores, online stores, and other applications.
