Rising Demand for Clean Label Products Drives Market Growth

The increase in junk food consumption is a significant factor driving the growth of the dough conditioner market. Junk food, which is highly processed and low in nutritional value, requires dough conditioners to maintain freshness and texture. For instance, in the United States, junk food consumption among adults has increased, leading to higher caloric intake from junk food. Dough conditioners play a crucial role in preserving these products and meeting consumer demands for convenience.

Key Players and Market Trends

Major companies in the dough conditioner market, such as Cargill Incorporated, Archer-Daniels-Midland Company, and Associated British Foods PLC, are focusing on product innovation to enhance product quality and meet consumer preferences. For example, Corbion introduced a new consumer-friendly dough-strengthening solution, allowing bakers to create dough with the strength and tolerance needed for high-speed commercial processing, reducing the need for expensive critical wheat gluten.
