AI Magazine is pleased to announce the appointment of Ellen Ullman as Vice President and Director of Sponsorships for its magazine, newsletter and website properties. Educate AI, a platform designed to address AI's role in K-12, colleges and workforce training, is scheduled to debut in late June.

I don't know of a school district, college or corporate training department that isn't actively looking for effective AI products to leverage the success of their programs.”

Sal Gerardo

According to Joel Backman, Editor in Chief at Educate AI, “Ellen is a premier talent in education media. Her knowledge of education and the education media market is second to none. We are thrilled to be able to work with her. Her connections and experience make her the perfect choice for this very important position, and we look forward to having her select the correct sponsors to allow AI to truly benefit those in K-12, higher education and corporate reskilling. The board and I couldn't be happier.”

“The demand for AI information and programs is tremendous,” said Sal Gerardo, Senior Director of AI Innovation at Educate AI Magazine. “I don't know of a school district, college or corporate training department that isn't actively looking for effective AI products to leverage the success of their programs. With Ellen on board, that becomes much more of a sure thing.”

Educate AI will publish the magazine six times per year, in addition to its newsletters and website. The magazine will be personality driven, featuring the people and stories behind the products, as well as the personalities in education that are working to incorporate AI into their administrative and instructional systems.
