Legalization of cannabis and cannabis derivatives including cannabidiol (CBD) and hemp oil have increased the popularity of these ingredients among wellness and personal care products industry. Consumers are looking for CBD-infused products with natural active ingredients over other chemical based cosmetics. As a result, the cosmetics and personal care industries are expected to witness significant growth in cosmetic product infused with CBD and hemp oil. Some the leading cosmetic brands are already offering or experimenting in CBD based skin care products. Upscale retailers and some private label brands have already launched some products, which show the influence of CBD in mainstream cosmetic market. This trend is expected to gain traction among the global CBD skin care market players in few years.

The producers of CBD-based cosmetic products are facing certain challenges due to controversial nature of cannabis-derived ingredients in cosmetic products. Manufacturers need to take more precautions during manufacturing operation to avoid cross-contamination between CBD and non-CBD products. As a result, many companies are planning to run a separate production line for CBD skin care products to avoid cross-contaminations.
