The Jordan Avi Ogman Foundation

The Jordan Avi Ogman Foundation was created to save 7-year-old Jordan Avi Orgman's life by his parents, David and Stacey Ogman. After years of struggling and delayed development, Jordan was diagnosed with TECPR2, a fatal, neurodegenerative, debilitating, genetic disease and the clock is ticking. Saving the lives of Jordan and the other children with TECPR2 can potentially lead to breakthroughs for other neurodegenerative diseases of the brain. TECPR2 and many well-known neurodegenerative diseases of the brain—such as ALS, Parkinson's disease, and Alzheimer's—are suspected to share a commonality of failure, impairment, and/or abnormalities of the autophagy (the body's way of cleaning out damaged cells in order to regenerate newer, healthier cells) process.
