 The Story of Limoncello

While Limoncello's heart lies in Italy, its popularity has spurred production worldwide. In the United States, enthusiasts have embraced the craft, creating local interpretations that capture the essence of Italian tradition with a distinctive American flair. Limoncello is cherished not only for its refreshing taste but also for its versatility. Traditionally served chilled as a digestif, it has also found its way into cocktails and culinary creations, adding a zesty kick to desserts and sauces. Limoncello embodies the spirit of conviviality and celebration, whether sipped on its own or mixed into inventive cocktails. Limoncello consumption rises globally each year, reflecting its growing popularity and cultural significance. The United States has witnessed a surge in demand for artisanal variations, prompting local producers to innovate and cater to evolving consumer preferences.

Co-founder Daphane Carter shares her enthusiasm for National Limoncello Day: "When the summer heat hands you lemons, drink limoncello! As you can see when you step outside, summer has arrived, and the 100degree days are here to stay. Sitting by the pool and sipping an ice-cold limoncello has a new meaning with the rising temperatures. It's the ideal bright, refreshing drink for surviving the summer heat. If you're having a summer party or an after-dinner drink, grab a bottle of Daphane Limoncello and serve it chilled or over ice. Happy Limoncello Day!"

American-Made Excellence: Daphane Limoncello and Raspberry Berrycello

Founded in 2022 by best friends Daphane Carter and Taia Rashid in Houston, Texas, Cashid Beverage Company stands as the first Black female-owned citrus-based liqueur producer in the United States. Inspired by a transformative family and friends trip to the Amalfi Coast, Daphane and Taia embarked on a journey to introduce their vision of authentic Limoncello to the American market. Differing from "traditional" limoncello, which is usually thick and sweet, the "Cashids," as they affectionately call themselves, decided to make a lighter, more aromatic blended beverage that could be consumed anytime and anywhere. Daphane Limoncello and Daphane Raspberry Berrycello have
