Aplastic Anemia Overview

Aplastic anemia is a rare but serious blood disorder characterized by the inability of the bone marrow to produce enough blood cells. This deficiency results in a decrease in red blood cells, white blood cells, and platelets, leading to symptoms such as fatigue, weakness, frequent infections, and easy bruising or bleeding. The condition can be acquired due to exposure to toxins, certain medications, infections, or autoimmune disorders, or it can be inherited. Diagnosis typically involves blood tests, bone marrow biopsy, and other specialized tests. Treatment options vary depending on the severity and cause of the aplastic anemia but may include blood transfusions, medications to stimulate blood cell production, immunosuppressive therapy, or bone marrow transplant. Close monitoring and ongoing medical care are essential for managing the condition and minimizing complications.
