appearances. And I certainly never imagined that I would become a media host myself or start Made to Change the World Publishing, a world-class publishing house run by women, for women, to celebrate and showcase women and to provide a platform for women to use their voice and tell their story.”

Shefi continued, “To be recognized on such a prestigious global scale for using my voice as an instrument of inspiration and change, and for creating platforms, programs, and services that empower other women, is both humbling and profoundly affirming. Empowering women to find their voice, stand in their power, shine their light, and live as a force for good is the honor of my life.”

Shefi shared her advice for those inspired to make a difference: “Remember that you have something powerful to share with the world; something only you can. Your uniqueness is your greatness! Know that your voice, your story, your message, and your life matter. Someone in the world is waiting for you to show up fully as you, so get out there and unapologetically shine your light. The world needs you!”

As a fierce advocate and changemaker with over 30 years of experience in law, business, education, and human, civil, and constitutional rights advocacy, Shefi continues to give a voice to the voiceless, fight against injustice, and create opportunities for others to stand up, speak up, show up, and shine.
