Furthermore, cyberattacks in all their forms are currently a significant problem on a global scale. Cyber weapons are easy to use anywhere in the world, low risk, cheap, and very effective. This new category of weapons is available to many states, terrorist or extremist groups, non-state actors, and even private persons to strike public utilities. Cybercrime organizations efficiently produce cyber weapons to thwart or defend against such attacks. Together with nation-states and non-state groups, newcomers also possess unparalleled espionage and surveillance capabilities. They frequently act as the start of unlawful actions against public services that result in damage, interruption, and monetary gain. This is anticipated to fuel market expansion during the forecast period.

Based on region, the market in North America was the largest in 2021, accounting for more than two-fifths of the global cyber weapon market size and is likely to maintain its dominance during the forecast timeframe. This is due to a rise in government fundings to maintain stability in cyberspace in the region. However, the market in Asia-Pacific is likely to show the fastest CAGR of 11.2% during the forecast period. The growth is attributed to increasing use by the military and governments the region to weaken an adversary's capabilities through supply-chain manipulation, domestic political division, deterioration of trust in governmental institutions, theft of databases.
