The FDM segment is to maintain its dominance by 2032

On the basis of distribution channel, the white label segment is estimated to showcase the fastest CAGR of 6.4% from 2023 to 2032. White-label retail allows retailers to have greater control over the branding and packaging of and lubricants. They customize the products to align with their target audience and brand image. This flexibility in branding provides a competitive advantage by offering unique products in the market. By choosing white-label products, retailers avoid the costs associated with product development, manufacturing, and quality control. However, the FDM segment held the major share in 2022, generating more than two-thirds of the global sexual wellness market share, and is estimated to maintain its leadership status throughout the forecast period. The FDM channel allows customers to find an array of products in one place, catering to their various needs and preferences. Customers find sexual wellness products in the same retail outlets where they shop for other everyday items, eliminating the need to visit specialized stores.

Asia-Pacific to garner the highest market share by 2031-

Based on region, the LAMEA region would cite the fastest CAGR of 5.5% throughout the forecast timeframe. There has been a notable increase in awareness and acceptance of sexual health and wellness in the LAMEA region. Growing awareness about safe and pleasurable sexual experiences has led to a higher demand for products such as lubricants, , and sprays. The LAMEA region has witnessed evolving sociocultural factors, including changing attitudes toward sex and sexuality. However, Asia-Pacific region dominated with the highest market share in terms of revenue in 2022, contributing to more than one-third of the global sexual wellness market and is estimated to maintain its leadership status throughout the forecast period. Rapid expansion and rise in the adoption of e-commerce in emerging economies such as India and China have considerably driven people to purchase lubricant, , and sex-enhancing sprays. Sex in India is taking a new and revolutionary shape, where people are openly talking about sex and sex-related activities through sex education, which is expected to influence the growth of the sexual wellness market in the region.
