From her early days in Coral Springs, Florida, to her creative ascent in Newtown, Connecticut, Tess's journey is a testament to her relentless drive and rich musical lineage, tracing back to her aunt, the late film and television actress Corinne Camacho.

Tess spent her teen years songwriting and recording alongside Connecticut music producer Michael Patzig. She studied classical piano, violin, and voice, earning her a spot at the prestigious Interlochen Center for the Arts. Tess later began a three-year collaboration with New Haven, Connecticut record producer Vic Steffens (Horizon Music Group), known for his work with renowned artists The Rolling Stones and Harry Connick Jr. Tess's dedication and talent earned her an internship at Horizon Studios, eventually leading to a brief signing with the label's subsidiary of Sony Records. Under the umbrella label "Horizon Music Group", she released her jazz-fusion single "Late Night Thoughts".

A self-taught maestro of digital audio workstations like Pro Tools and Logic Pro, Tess's journey took an exhilarating turn with her collaboration with Jake Siberon, a producer and multi-instrumentalist from the band Mile-Marker-Zero. Together, they crafted the hit singles "Human Nature" and "Turn Me Up" in 2023. Tess's magnum opus, "In These Dreams," an orchestral ballad released in August 2023, showcased her dual prowess as a songwriter and producer. The track, mixed by Grammy-Award winner Mario McNulty, catapulted to global acclaim, hitting top charts, and becoming Tess's most notable work.

Tess's passion for songwriting and producing extends well beyond her projects. She finds the greatest joy in writing and producing music for other artists and bands, exploring diverse sounds and styles. She has written for artists Britney Spears, Mila Jam, and others. Tess, now curating an impressive catalog of music for film and television, continues to song write and produce for an eclectic roster of artists.
