The increasing prevalence of chronic diseases is a significant factor propelling the growth of the portable medical devices market. Chronic diseases, which require ongoing medical treatment and interfere with daily activities, necessitate effective health management solutions. Portable medical devices assist patients in tracking health conditions, providing critical support for rehabilitation and chronic care. For example, the number of individuals aged 50 and older in the US with at least one chronic condition is expected to increase from 71.522 million in 2020 to 142.66 million by 2050, emphasizing the need for portable medical solutions.
